★ WAR COMES HOME: WASHINGTON'S BATTLE AGAINST AMERICA'S VETERANS

When writer Aaron Glantz was initially embedded in Middle East war zones with the U.S. military, writing a book about TBI (Traumatic Brain Injury) was likely not the first thing on his mind. But the injury that has become the physical hallmark of the Bush-era wars is now the main focus of his writings, as he walks the reader through several very personal peripheral struggles in government bureaucracy with his book, War Comes Home: Washington's Battle Against America's Veterans. Reminding us just how recently removed we are from the latest Walter Reed scandal, Glantz gives an up close view of just how broken the system still is. ★ 830 BILLION DOLLARS NOT SPENT MAKING OUR TROOPS ARMY STRONG

A June 2009 official government report, on the 830 billion dollar wars currently being waged against a ghost enemy in Iraq and Afghanistan, included such words as waste, fraud and abuse. The same report also acknowledged that there are now more than 240,000 private contractors involved in U.S. war efforts, more than the number of soldiers in the same conflicts. Oversights, fraud and poor decisions - such as building a 30 million dollar mess hall in a location scheduled to be evacuated in less than a year, are emptying America's pockets as we face another Great Depression. It's your money. Come see how it is being spent, and watch the video about this report, at www.CAMMMO.org

★ U.S. ARMY RANGER'S MOTHER: "MY SON IS A MURDERER"

Susan Galleymore traveled almost 7,500 miles to get to a military base in Iraq's Sunni triangle. She was on a mission to tell her son something that she felt she had to say in person. That message was, "Don't do anything you'll regret or be ashamed of because it will haunt you for the rest of your life." The stories she heard during and after that journey to see her son, as well as the things she saw firsthand while in the Middle East chronicle her decision not to return to California, but to stay and fight her own battle to make Americans care about these wars; by telling these stories through the eyes of mothers with children on both sides of the conflict.
